

Library

Yes, when I travel, I try to maintain some style. Although my mobile library contains only a limited number of books, it is nevertheless a library. You will not find any encyclopedia in it. But there is enough space for travel books, books on first aid, dictionaries and so on. There is not much more to say, just look at the picture.

Perhaps somewhat more imaginative was my idea to store actually needed street-maps and important documents in an old leather briefcase, above the Defender's storage box. However, the briefcase should not consist of plastic, real leather withstands fibration much better. I fixed the entire thing with some blind revets (no marks left on the documents).

Well, with that I have fast access of important papers and in addition they are stored properly and protected from dust.

Particularly in case of police controls it is advantageous to have the most important documents instantly ready. (in Russia I was stopped by the police quite often just for curiosity).
